Rosina Bierbaum is Dean of the School of Natural Resources and Environment at the University of Michigan. Dr. Bierbaum has had a distinguished career in government and academia with a focus on environmental science and related policy concerns. Prior to joining the University of Michigan in 2001, Dr. Bierbaum was Acting Director of the White House Office of Science and Technology Policy (OSTP), having previously directed the OSTP Environment Division. Dr. Bierbaum is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Science as well as of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. Dr. Bierbaum’s awards include the Waldo E Smith medal of the American Geophysical Union for “extraordinary service to geophysics”. President Obama has named Dr. Bierbaum to the President’s Council of Advisors on Science and Technology (PCAST). PCAST consists of 20 of the nation’s leading scientists and engineers who advise the President and Vice President directly to help formulate policy in the many areas where understanding of science, technology and innovation is key to forming responsible and effective policy.
